Community Grants: BBCF’s Commitment to “Trust-Based Philanthropy” Approach

BBCF has long awarded Community Grants throughout the Black Belt to address a wide variety of community needs. The money provided has had an unquestionable impact on the citizens of the counties receiving these awards. In 2023, BBCF adopted a new and even more responsive model of giving based on the practice known as “Trust-Based Philanthropy”. This approach centers on equity, humility, and transparency, by redistributing power so those closest to the issues determine the appropriate solutions. Trust-based philanthropy utilizes honesty, trust, respect, and anti-racist policies to centralize power over resources and outcomes in the community.

BBCF has developed 10 grantmaking principles and guidelines to assure the tenets of Trust-Based Philanthropy are fully actualized. Grantmaking decisions must align with the mission and vision of BBCF, while acting on the values of the community and collaborating with partners to seek and select solutions. In the process, the grants must expand community engagement while meeting and impacting genuine community needs. Projects chosen are funded at a level to ensure intended outcomes can be achieved. Diversity, equity, and inclusion are additionally measured by promotion of anti-racist behaviors. The entire grantmaking process must be performed with integrity and transparency. By utilizing BBCF Local Grant Committees in each county, decisions are made by those closest to the issues voiced by their community. Local Grant Committees score applications from their county based on community needs, proposed delivery of services, potential of project to change the community, how the project will be evaluated, and the results of those evaluations disseminated, and finally, the requested budget for the project. The BBCF expects the principles, guidelines, and process, to enhance the impact of the already successful Community Grants program.
